

I'm Suzanne Nuri-Nixon, a current Wymondham Town Councillor as well as a South Norfolk District Councillor for South Wymondham.

I was born in London and grew up there. I worked in the family fish and chips' business then as a journalist for a community newspaper. I also worked in health and safety, ensuring workplaces were suitable for taking on work experience students.

But I have always done voluntary work too whether as a PTA member at my children's school, community minibus driver for the elderly, volunteer ESOL teacher or as a school governor.

For years I was an activist and campaigner with a human rights' group, helping shape campaigns and coming up with innovative ways to get our message out.

I have a strong sense of equality and fairness and I truly believe Norfolk has been neglected for far too long. If elected as a County councillor, I will work hard to ensure the people of Norfolk are served far better than the Conservative-run administration. I'm married to Lucy, have two grown up daughters and a mischievous kitten called Daisy. I enjoy going to concerts and musical theatre, watching tennis, football, Eurovision and Star Trek.
